

Abstract

5 A process for removing a source-derived contaminant from a hydrocarbon-containing material, including contacting the hydrocarbon-containing material with a clay in a filter apparatus, at least part of the source-derived contaminant being sorbed by the clay; and removing hydrocarbon-containing material from the filter apparatus, wherein the removed hydrocarbon-containing material comprises a reduced amount of the source-derived contaminant.